Born on February the 11th, Jennifer is an Aquarian. The traits that operate under this particular sign may have some bearing on her track record. People born under Aquarius are typically driven to have nice things around them, but are not greedy. They are also prepared to work beyond the call of duty to attain their material goals, but never expect anyone to work harder than themselves. In the circles that Jennifer moves in, wealth is seemingly not an issue, so perhaps she needs to put more focus on the personality of a would-be suitor?

Brad Pitt rarely speaks about his relationship with Jennifer, but in a recent interview said that, in the final stages of their marriage, they had to work out if they “didn’t want to go on without any outside influence.” This hints at a difference in characters. Brad is a Sagittarian, typically down-to-earth and generous of spirit, although with a tendency to be argumentative. Could the zodiac have determined Brad and Jen’s incompatibility?

Jennifer’s star traits also include a fear of being affectionate. Aquarians can be highly strung and are prone to saying things in the heat of the moment; things that they might regret later. Interestingly, the most perceptive trait of an Aquarian can also cost them a lot of happiness; Aquarians are renowned for being able to ‘read people’ almost effortlessly. Perhaps Jennifer’s Aquarian tendency towards being highly strung might cause her to “zone in” on the negative traits of a partner and sabotage any potential for future happiness.

In zodiac terms, an Aquarian’s most compatible partner should be a Gemini. Geminis are intelligent, creative and appreciative of a partner’s positive aspects, as well as being sensitive to their insecurities. While some might interpret the sign of the twins as being an entanglement of paradoxes, the reality is that Geminis are ready to accept characteristics in a partner that are apparently opposite to their own. This is because the duality of their star sign gives them greater insight into the essence of another person.

Brad has also said of Jennifer that they remain “the deepest of friends”. This is certainly true of Aquarians; they are fantastic in a friendship, but they choose their friends very carefully. In a Gemini man, Jennifer could expect to find a partner who is equally at home in the company of her friends, as he is in the company of his own. And, as Aquarians are always racing around trying to cure all the ills in the world, a Gemini partner could not only offer support, but an understanding and safe haven when those Aquarian nerves finally become overwrought.

EastEnders

How a long-shot became a classic

by Kirsten Cross

Currently celebrating its 25th anniversary, EastEnders has become one of Britain's best-loved TV shows, an institution that has left on indelible mark on the nation's psyche. First broadcast on the 19th February 1985, the show was the brainchild of Julia Smith and Tony Holland: a well-established team in the world of TV production. They eventually settled on the East End of London as their focus and, as legend has it, created the biographies of the first 23 characters in 24 hours. But what hidden dynamics allowed this team to be so effective in such a short space of time?

Julia Smith was born on the 26th May 1927, making her a Gemini. Tony Holland, however, was born on the 18th January 1940, under the sign of Capricorn. Although they were never romantically involved, their star signs proved to be a vibrant and energetic partnership; Gemini and Capricorn, when working together, are a force to be reckoned with.

The main challenge faced by this astrological pairing is that of arriving at the same place at the same time. These signs approach things from opposite ends of the spectrum; Gemini likes to think outside the box, using wit and humour to achieve their aims, whilst Capricorn prefers the safety of tried-and-tested routes to reach their destinations.

Evidence of both these signs at work can be seen in the stories surrounding the conception of EastEnders. Holland delved into his family history to create a variety of characters and situations, including the Fowlers and the Beales. Tony's aunt, Lou Beale, inspired the much loved character of the same name and his own experiences as a barman were used to develop one of the most vivacious double-acts in soap history: Den and Angie Watts.

By contrast, Julia Smith was well known for pushing the envelope into new territory, taking the show in directions that would challenge and even upset its audience. Bill Treacher, who played Arthur Fowler, described her as full of "energy and dynamism," where Tony was known for his Capricorn traits of being unassuming and quiet; perhaps another example of opposites meeting to create a positive charge.

The show itself was first aired on February 19th, 1985. February the 19th has always been an interesting date in the zodiac – and a very contentious one. This date falls right between the signs of Aquarius and Pisces, making it neither one nor the other – or an extremely potent combination of them both. However you choose to look at it, this date is most definitely on the cusp of either sign. In addition, this day is the 50th in the Gregorian calendar.

The 19th of February in 1985 was filled with contradictions, including the deaths of 148 passengers on an Iberian Airlines Boeing 747 and the release of the first recipient of an artificial heart, William J

Schroeder. Could the combinations of astrological influences have had a significant effect on a show that was only expected to last for six months? Gillian Taylforth, who played Kathy Beale said she remembered "sitting in the green room chatting to Letitia Dean, who played Sharon Watts, and Anita Dobson, who played Angie Watts, about "what we would do once it was over." 25 years later, EastEnders is going strong and has celebrated its quarter-century with a live episode, unmasking the murderer of Archie Mitchell.

Part of EastEnders's durability has been its ability to adapt with the times, entertain and to present its audience with new and often unpopular points of view, whilst striving to give a realistic, although often humorous, portrayal of East End life. The desire to create something extraordinary from the seemingly mundane is a trait well recognised in individuals born on the 19th February. In order to grab the viewer's attention, storylines have to be sensationalised, yet they are rooted in a reality that doesn't require a complete suspension of belief to become engrossing. The show pioneered the use of a domestic serial as a vehicle for serious social issues such as racism, homophobia and alcoholism at a time when soaps were thought to be only suitable as an escape.

The impact of EastEnders on our daily lives can be found in everything from music to advertising. The hysteria promoted by the shooting of Phil Mitchell caused Radio 1's Chris Moyles to remix Shaggy's 'It Wasn't Me' to fall in with the storyline. Mike Reid used his persona as Frank Butcher to advertise a soft drink and there is even a monthly

'Dot Cotton Club' at a nightclub in Cambridge. Over the last 25 years, the soap has provided some of the most memorable TV moments in soap history, from Dirty Den serving Angie with divorce papers on Christmas Day to the wedding of Alfie Moon and Kat Slater. So it is small wonder that it has imprinted itself on our collective unconscious.

Whatever it is that draws us to EastEnders seems to have as much capacity to affect its stars as it does the public. Remembering her time as Ruth Fowler, Caroline Paterson said that when she started, "I felt like I was acting and they were all being themselves – they were just relaxed and living it."

Perhaps this is the key to EastEnders success; the dynamic combination the creators' star signs, combined with a release date that causes many an astrologer's eyebrow to raise, has somehow provided us with an alternate reality that many of us wish were real, if only to act as a yardstick against which to measure our own successes and failures.

Whether EastEnders is your soap of choice or not, it is difficult to argue with the figures: it is watched by an average of six to 11 million people every episode. And whether you believe in astrology or not, it is hard to deny that the soap's success is something out of the ordinary.

Aries (Mar 21 - Apr 19)

You love new ventures, and the ground is fertile this month, but misunderstandings and delays may annoy your pioneering spirit as Mercury moves backwards through your business zone. The need for practical action to back up your surging creativity doesn't exactly thrill you, but there are those who thrive on the details, and help is on the way - provided you spot it. Mars continues to move through your area of offings and playful romance, and new attractions will surely appear. If already in a relationship, take this opportunity to give new life to those aspects where excitement is lacking.

Taurus (Apr 20 - May 20)

The sun in your sign will enhance your sensual side, and once Mercury turns direct in your sign on the 11th, the coast is clear to make plans and enjoy yourself with friends, family and fine dining. A new moon in your sign will make you even more perky and ready for action. Talk about money matters with your partner as Venus moves through the cash-related area of your chart. When tension grows between you and a partner, or you begin to feel tired of sitting at home, go for large spaces with lots of people to bring fresh energy and inspiration.

Gemini (May 21 - June 21)

This is quite a yin-yang of a month for you, Gemini. The first half of the month throws up a lot of challenges and you may see your words betray you more than once. But you find your groove again when Mercury turns direct on the 12th, and take it up another notch when the Sun enters your sign on the 22nd. Whatever your relationship status, this month won't be boring. Mars lends a stagey, showy energy to your words and expressions while Venus, the love planet, moves through your sign for most of the month. A full moon in your partnership sector may bring the culmination of a crush or the end of a relationship.

Libra (Sept 23 - Oct 22)

Uncertainty about a relationship is coming to an end, and you begin to see it in a clearer light, whether it's a friendship or romance. There may even be issues with dividing up money or goods, and your sense of fair play may not be mutual. It's time to weigh your options and decide what's really right for you. On a much brighter side, don't let anything stop you from mingling this month - you are feeling socially adventurous and spontaneous with words. If you play your cards right, you'll find an golden opportunity to charm someone in a high position.

Scorpio (Oct 23 - Nov 21)

In terms of business and money, strike while the iron is hot - and it is hot this month, so go for a promotion or look for shortcuts to save cash. A partnership will show strain, but this is a good test to see whether the connection is really deep, or whether other motives are in play. Someone who you've wanted to see, but has proved elusive, will come around a few weeks into the month after Mercury turns direct, and you'll get your chance. If you're single, the new moon in your relationship sector may bring a pleasant surprise.

Sagittarius (Nov 22 - Dec 21)

Routine is hardly your favourite thing, and the first half of this month may have you slogging through details you'd rather not address. But don't despair - the Moon and Mars are giving you a serious boost, so expect the unexpected and let your curiosity guide you into the uncharted waters you crave. A chatty Venus is sauntering through your relationship zone, and a trip to the movies or bookstore may reveal something more interesting than film or literature! Finally, the 28th brings a full Moon in your sign, and your bright aura will not go unnoticed as Summer approaches.

Cancer (June 22 - July 22)

It may feel as though the past is pulling you in the wrong direction, and you may be forced to redefine your relationship to an old lover, friend, or even your career. But you'll find help in a new friendship, and by month's end your stern will be pointed toward the future. As for romance, Venus enters your sign on the 21st bringing heightened possibilities of love and a need for beauty in your surroundings. It's also a great month to get in touch with your body, make positive changes to your physical health, and even lose weight if you want to!

Leo (July 23 - Aug 22)

You will feel the power of self-expression this month as Mars continues blazing a trail through your sign, and others will feel it too - you will love the extra attention coming your way. Your area of romance and flings is positively sizzling and a steamy situation will not wait to develop - it will hit suddenly and fog the windows! With all this fiery energy, you run the risk of getting into unnecessary arguments, particularly at work. Perform random acts of warmth and kindness for others and allow your magnetism to serve the greater good.

Virgo (Aug 23 - Sep 22)

In this day and age, getting ahead means getting extra creative. Your head is buzzing with valuable ideas, so make all the plans you want, but don't act on them just yet. Saturn has backed into your sign and may have you tying up loose ends with something old. On top of that, Mercury warns not to finalise anything until it turns direct on the 12th. Still, this month is fertile ground for dreaming up new directions, so don't let it pass you by. A fresh face may appear in an old haunt - strike up a conversation and see what happens.

A partnership will show strain, but this is a good test to see if the connection is really deep.

Capricorn (Dec 22 - Jan 19)

Ambition turns you on in more ways than one, and the line between work and play may be blurred this month. Something may happen in the area of love that you wish to keep secret, such as a work-related infatuation or romance. Best keep it to yourself until Mercury goes direct on the 12th - or better yet, until June when Saturn goes direct and things clear up even more. Take a lighthearted approach - be the star of your own sexy detective story and have fun with the intrigue around you; real life can be much more exciting than the movies.

Aquarius (Jan 20 - Feb 18)

You may have some strange or mixed feelings as Saturn moves backward into your 8th house, and a long standing dispute may drag on, but these will all be ironed out when Saturn goes direct at month's end. Cultivate your prospects carefully and have patience. With Venus moving airily through your romance zone, and a full moon in your house of friendship, a breezy Spring fling is a distinct possibility. Home and family need your attention this month, and your effort to be there will be hugely appreciated.

Pisces (Feb 19 - Mar 20)

Steady communication is the way to sort out those deep, hard to pin down feelings. With your optimistic and sociable attitude, entertaining guests at home will provide much needed relief from the rigidity the daily grind. Speaking of the daily grind, the moon in your career zone has you considering a new direction, and you can't hide your feelings for long - they are bound to come out and be expressed. Luckily, the right words will not be hard to find as your area of words and expression is strongly energised.

Cancer partner

Has your partner stopped inviting you round so that they can cook for you? | Does your partner use their pet name for you less frequently? | Does your partner go and stay with his/her mother more than they used to? | Do you find that your partner doesn't want to cuddle and snuggle with you as much as they used to? | Does your partner burst into tears at the drop of a hat and seem overly sentimental?

Scorpio partner

Has your partner started to accuse you of being unfaithful? | Does your partner no longer look you in the eyes when you're making love? | Has your partner visited more than one clairvoyant recently? | Has your partner started to keep their schedule private and doesn't tell you what they're doing or when? | Does your partner start a fight so they can storm out of the house in the middle of the night?

Pisces partner

Does your partner spend a lot of time volunteering or doing charity work? | Does your partner drink too much when you're together? | Has your partner stopped writing poems or songs dedicated to you? | Does your partner habitually stare off into space oblivious to whatever you're doing? | Does your partner disappear for hours on end and tell you that they "want to be alone"?

How many questions did you answer YES?

No worries! Your partner only has eyes for you and is faithful as can be.

2-3

No cause for alarm. Your partner is average. Their attention is sometimes on you and sometimes elsewhere.

4-5

Watch out! Your partner has either stopped making an effort or is turning into a right flirt.

READER PROFILE JOANNA

When did you first realise you were psychic?

I first realised I was psychic at a very young age, I was starting to see situations and sense things around me that felt "different" and almost quite scary. Before long I had no choice to but to take it seriously. When I was around 6 years old, I felt I knew things other people didn't. I would say to people "did you see that?" or "did you sense that?" and people would look confused. So whenever I would get impressions, I would keep them to myself.

Dreams began to come true more and more as time went on, and I would pick up on people coming back into my life again.

Have you had any great experiences with a customer who you have read for?

I had a lovely experience with 2 gentlemen I did a reading for almost year ago. They were living here in the UK but wanted desperately to live in Australia. The only problem they had was obtaining a visa, selling their house, getting another job, and wanting their family here in the UK to move with them, (impossible at the time because of health reasons). Looking into it, I saw that the house would be sold first. They both disagreed as they wanted to get their visa sorted first, but I was adamant that the house would be sold firstly. We nearly had an argument over this but I felt strongly about it. Within a week their house was in fact up for sale, and sold within a month, even though houses weren't selling well in their area. They were moved out within 3 months into rented accommodation.

I saw another problem: one of their fathers had serious knee problems and wasn't well enough to move out. It was true that his knee was causing him a lot of distress and he needed surgery before he could fly. I saw the operation happening within 6 months, and that high blood pressure may prevent him from flying. A few months on, the client's father was healthy after an operation and ready to go to Australia. He was in fact suffering from high blood pressure and the doctor was concerned he wasn't able to fly, but this was dealt with, and ultimately they all made it to Australia!

What makes a good psychic reading?

Good psychics and clairvoyants should help the clients explore their life and the options open to them. They will try and help the clients gain some perspective on their life. They shouldn't ever tell the clients what to do; they should understand that the clients are in control of their life and the decisions that they make. I feel being empathic and to be a great listener helps alongside some counseling skills and knowledge should help and guide the client as much as possible using whatever tools works best for the psychic.

“ Good psychics should help clients explore their life and the options open to them.
