Rooster

Sag

Bette Midler was born 1st December, 1945 in Honolulu, making her a Sagittarius under the Chinese sign of the Rooster. As one of few Jewish children in a largely Asian neighbourhood, she stood out from the start—and while some kids would have felt shy and isolated in these circumstances, Bette hit the ground running. The Rooster is wired to soak up attention like a sponge, and Sagittarius loves a challenge. In this way, the potential adversity in Bette’s early life was quickly converted into confidence and popularity. Voted “Most Talkative” and “Most Dramatic” in her high school yearbooks, one might say she was already becoming a star.

Honolulu is a sprawling city with beautiful mountain and ocean backdrops—the kind of place many people dream of living—but it didn’t take long for young Bette to set her sights elsewhere. After three semesters studying drama at the University of Hawaii, she dropped out and headed for New York City. This is a signature Sagittarius move, traveling to faraway places with lofty goals in mind. Sag is a restless sign, and doesn’t like to wait around forever. Bette’s Sag nature suspected that destiny would lend a hand if she went out on a limb—and she was right.

The year she landed in New York, Bette landed her first professional acting job. It was a small production, far from the bright lights of Broadway, but it was a start. The following year, and for three years after that, she played a role in the Broadway production of Fiddler on the Roof. One might think that Bette's music and film career would take off from here, but an unexpected interlude comes first.

Once a Rooster gets a taste of the spotlight, he may not like to share it. He is also known for being brazen, direct, and unafraid of controversy. These are some of the reasons why

Bette, coming off of her successful Broadway run, chose to sing regularly in a gay bathhouse. Some might have said this was not a good career move, but they would have been short-sighted! Not only was Bette the centre of attention during these performances, she also developed her first dedicated fan base—one that would continue to grow for decades to come. In addition, her pianist at the bathhouse was none other than Barry Manilow, who would go on to produce her first album. The Rooster marches to the beat of its own drummer, despite what anybody else thinks. He relishes in the admiration of others. Sagittarius, meanwhile, is often ahead of the curve on social issues, going boldly where others fear to tread. Bette connected with her audience in a powerful way that showed her potential as a solo entertainer.

The rest is history. Bette starred in the rock opera Tommy, and appeared on The Tonight Show in 1971. The following year she released her debut album, which achieved Platinum status and won a Grammy for Best New Artist. A slew of follow-up albums extended her fan base into the millions, and in typical fiery fashion, her first role in a motion picture, The Rose, earned her an Academy Award nomination for Best Actress. Bette's fate as a crossover superstar had been sealed.

The ability to hold the attention of so many fans across multiple artistic mediums is something not many celebrities can do, but it's something Bette was cut out for. The restless and curious Sagittarius energy is seldom happy with only one option, and needs multiple creative outlets to flourish. The Rooster, meanwhile, likes to strut around and make itself heard in every way possible. Combine these instincts with true talent and charisma, and you have the makings of a rare star.

Another rarity is Midler's love life, which has seen her married to the same man, actor Martin von Haselberg, since 1984. Given their impromptu Las Vegas wedding, officiated by an Elvis impersonator, this longevity seems all the more unlikely. The pride and jealousy often exhibited by Roosters has earned them a reputation of being tough partners—and yet, once the Rooster finds a good match, their loyalty and directness can endow a partnership with lifelong durability.

The new comedy Parental Guidance, co-starring Billy Crystal, hits theatres on Christmas day, giving us a fresh look at the talent that has captivated audiences for decades.

This isn't the first time Bette has stepped into the holiday spotlight. Her 2006 Christmas album, Cool Yule, received a Grammy nomination for Best Traditional Vocal Pop Album, proving once again that she can still compete with the best. It seems that show business was in this Rooster's blood from the start, and will be for years to come.

Aries (Mar 21 - Apr 19)

A flourish of new ideas arrives in the last month of the year. Now is the time to put yourself ahead of the curve, so that when the competition is still on the launch pad, you are up in the air. Finding the right person to work with is key—the support of others is necessary now more than ever. You will notice a distinct desire to rock the boat after the 12th, but there is a difference between joyriding and effecting meaningful change. Your willpower breeds animosity in somebody on the other side of a transaction or business deal, but a surprise gesture of kindness sets things right. Love prospects are much better after the new year.

Taurus (Apr 20 - May 20)

Love relationships come to the fore as the year winds down. Translation: You may be in for a romantic holiday season! Communication and hard work are part of the equation, but joy is the anchor. As long as you have this, the rest will fall into place. If you're unattached and seeking companionship, a light and breezy connection isn't what it seems to be. Look for something to start on a more serious note, with deep conversation revealing a connection. Now this could be the start of something good. It isn't the best time for new financial ventures. You will find better opportunities to play your hand once 2012 is a thing of the past.

Gemini (May 21 - June 21)

Now that you've decided which direction to go, it's time to set the wheels in motion. The journey of a thousand miles, says the Tao Te Ching, begins with a single step. This was never more relevant than it is now! Little efforts add up, and that which seems far away will soon grow larger on the horizon. Opposites attract in the world of romance, but is it sustainable? Only one way to find out—suit up and dive in. Don't be discouraged if your sun signs are not traditionally compatible—other astrological factors can make up the difference. If you're unsure, a detailed astrological or psychic reading illuminates the situation.

Libra (Sept 23 - Oct 22)

Just when you thought you had tied the ropes tight, a recent improvement in your love life seems to have come undone. Don't panic! You will reach the right destination as long as you stay the course of intuition and honesty. Small and manageable goals are the key for spiritual improvement at this time. Start with little things and build from there. Your financial picture could get rosier these next few weeks, provided your decisions are in-step with deeper feelings. A noble impulse to be high-minded is putting pressure on your desire to be seen and heard in the immediate environment. Go with authenticity over ideals.

Scorpio (Oct 23 - Nov 21)

A rare surge of creative energy comes to you this month, bringing a number of risks and rewards into play. On the negative side, you are tempted to pursue goals that are essentially self-serving. You are also prone to dominate conversations and make abrupt remarks in the presence of others. But if you are aware of these possibilities, and make an effort to disarm them as they arise, your creative surge will bring about only positive effects. Given your cozy blend of sensitivity and confidence, don't be surprised if a love interest comes your way—just don't be fooled by glitzy promises.

Sagittarius (Nov 22 - Dec 21)

The Sun is in your sign, ready to shine on the new you—yet there are other energies at play, related to the past. It's impossible to really move forward until these things have been resolved. Once they have, you'll feel amazing. Take stock of a relationship and talk about what has and hasn't worked this past year. Be honest about the times you've felt caged, yearning for escape. If your partner can't handle honesty, how can they expect to handle another year with you!? If you're on the lookout for a new relationship, it's not necessary to wait until the new year. If you push yourself to be bold, sweet rewards are likely to come your way.

Cancer (June 22 - July 22)

A strong emotional presence compels you to be honest with yourself and others.

This direct approach works well for making an impression on someone new, but an existing partner is likely to feel threatened. A clash of wills is probable, and the vibe will get heated. If you want to keep the relationship healthy, find colors and gestures that have a cooling effect. The tides of spiritual introspection are high, so you'll also need some time alone. Show discipline in terms of holiday food and drink. Transfer some of that energy to your vision for the future. You know you are coming closer to your true calling when the line between work and play starts to blur.

Leo (July 23 - Aug 22)

Your risk of over-indulgence is high, not only with holiday goodies, but with social and family events. Trying to do too much and please everybody will have you reeling to start the year off right. Your psychic-self needs quiet, calm and introspection as the darkness of the year reaches its peak. This is perhaps the most talked-about winter solstice in human history, but the best way to observe it is simple: give yourself more time and space than usual, keep your body healthy, and tune into your sense of mystery and awe. The transition to better ways of living, and all the benefits that will come along with it, is effortless when you put your intuition in the driver's seat.

Virgo (Aug 23 - Sep 22)

A psychic logjam finally breaks loose around the 12th. Proper flow is restored in the areas of financial and spiritual growth. Now is the time to understand the hidden influences at work in your life, and take steps to bring about your desires. In the middle of the month, you feel the focus shift from activities in the world to life at home. Your family members may hold you to the past, but you don't have to follow suit. Let them know that they are free to change in your eyes, and resist being drawn into games. Boost your psychic health by spending time with good friends—people with whom you share an spiritual bond. You are too close to a partner to see them clearly. A little space is healthy.

The transition to better living is effortless when you put your intuition in the driver's seat.

Capricorn (Dec 22 - Jan 19)

This is an excellent time to introduce your current flame to friends and neighbours. People appreciate a more transparent situation, and this kind of openness brings unexpected perks your way. You are showing a more intense and abrupt side of yourself, which is good for getting things done. However, you run the risk of alienating someone who thought they had you pegged. The truth is that people are constantly changing. Believe in your own internal changes and they will become reality. Casual conversation may lead to an attractive work opportunity for the coming year, so keep your ears—and your mind—open.

Aquarius (Jan 20 - Feb 18)

A flare-up of projects at work or home is actually a good thing, like a wave of constructive energy for you to ride. There are large-scale changes happening in your psyche, but an intellectual approach won't get you very far. You'll have to feel your way through, and when the feelings don't seem to make sense, find something else to occupy your mind. It's no surprise that the more social you are this month, the better your chances at sparking a love connection—if that's what you're after. First impressions can be deceiving. Someone who turns you off at first will re-surface in your mind later, prompting you to think again.

Pisces (Feb 19 - Mar 20)

Your self-image is changing for the better, but during the transition you may feel like there nothing solid to hold on to. You find it tempting to slip into the mold others have created for you, but you know this is the easy way out. Look for a firm and protective friend who has your back and respects your individuality. Seek grounding and clear direction in work and learning projects. These will aim and guide your psychic strengths. The small pleasures of the season touch your senses and inspire you to look beyond appearances into a wider, more mystical landscape. A temporary setback with family can be corrected with patience and tact.

Saving your Relationship

Intimate relationships give us joy, love and a sense of belonging—yet all too often, they end in apathy and alienation. If your relationship seems to be sinking beneath the waves, there are ways to make it vibrant and buoyant again.

The obvious first step in saving a relationship is to consider whether or not it is really worth saving. Attempting to restore it for the wrong reasons is only a way of prolonging the inevitable and increasing the eventual heartache of separation.

So is your relationship is worth saving? To find the answer, ask yourself what you are really getting out of it. If you have been using the relationship to cover something up—a lack of self-respect, for example, or fear of being alone—then these feelings are at least partly responsible for the current state of things. Likewise, your partner may be using you to mask deep-seated emotions, or to run away from something in his or her own psyche. In this case, both partners must tend their own garden and work to illuminate those blind spots. Psychically unstable individuals, no matter how in love or attached they may be, cannot form a psychically stable union.

► Release Definitions

Certain definitions are necessary in this world. Names, locations, facts—these are part of everyday life. But can a human psyche or spirit, with all its unique strengths and vulnerabilities, be defined? What happens when we build conceptual walls around someone, and do not allow them to roam free? What are the effects of trying to block someone from deciding who they want to be?

It might sound abstract, but it happens all the time. Couples spend countless hours together—eating, sleeping, talking. Eventually, they think they know all there is to know about each other. There may be a warmth to this kind of knowing at first, but it often turns cold and bitter with time. One or both partners feel they have lost their ability to change and transform into something new.

Breaking the habit of psychic imprisonment is not a one-time decision made by one partner or the other. It is a mutual, ongoing practice that keeps the roots of the relationship thriving and healthy. In love as in spirituality, it's all about discovering new ground and being open to new perspectives. The most successful relationships are those that encourage transformation.

► Respect Individuality

Variety is the spice of life, and although compatibility has brought you together, the mission of a healthy relationship is not to merge into one lukewarm personality. Respecting differences of habit and personal preference, without reacting incredulously or belittling your partner, is key to rescuing the relationship. Sure, there are compromises—but these should never overwhelm the fact of individual identity.

Remember—the reason you are with this person is because he or she is different, a mirror through which you can see new aspects of yourself and the world. If your partner's individuality threatens you, or beings up fears of abandonment, it's time to turn your gaze inward until the source of the problem is visible.

► Subtle Changes in the External

If you and your partner are doing the inner-work to right the ship, external changes can be a remarkable aid. Changes in hair and wardrobe, getting in shape, or introducing a new perfume are a few examples. Re-arranging a room or two, and looking for ways to improve the flow of energy in the home (whether you live together or not) send powerful signals that positive change is occurring. The trick is to not go overboard. External changes that are too sudden or drastic send a message of inauthenticity, whereas subtle changes build an atmosphere of gradual and consistent change.

► Love

When all is said and done, you and your partner are together because you love each other. You want to support one another and help each other to realize hopes and dreams. Loving another person is a gift, not a duty or obligation. Remembering this is perhaps the most important thing of all.

In need of inspiration or guidance?

6 ways to flirt and seduce

1. psychic caressing

Most of us imagine touching or caressing the object of our desire, but few understand how to harness the power of this imaginative act.

To make it work, first enter into a daydream or meditative state, otherwise known as the Alpha state. This can be done by simply closing your eyes and letting your thoughts drift until you feel in tune with a slightly deeper level of consciousness. Once there, allow an image of your love-interest to form in your mind. Start with a gentle, unobtrusive touch on the arm or shoulders. Feel the person's skin, the warmth of their body. Through your touch, convey the message that you want to be closer to them, and that you are ready when they are.

3. forget about it!

Many of us approach love with an attitude of lack and longing. Despite our attempts to hide it, this energy is being broadcast and received on a psychic level.

Athletes and artists describe peak performance as being "in the zone." This is a state in which the conscious mind is quiet, and you are confident in your ability to succeed. In this case, getting in the zone is really as simple as cultivating an appreciation of life, and a fundamental acceptance of yourself as you are. When these aspects of your psyche are developed, there is no longer any neediness in your signal. It shines brighter and clearer, and people feel no pressure in flirting with you.

5. feng shui

Your home environment is a reflection of who you are and what you want. Making adjustments can harmonise your external reality with your internal desires.

Is there a lot of artwork on your walls representing solitary people and objects? Consider displaying things in pairs. Are there a lot of mirrors or gadgets in your bedroom? Consider removing these to create a more intimate, sensual environment. Are there a lot of depictions of water in your home? Try shifting the focus to fire and passion. Use your living space as a tool to reinforce the confident and romantic energies in your psyche.

2. time constraints

Giving the impression that your life is busy and full of options, whether it is true or not, has a surprising effect on the person you want to flirt with. It lets them know that your life is in place, and that you are not depending of them to fill some essential need.

The trick is to part ways after a moment of levity, and leave a lingering impression that a connection has been made. Be sure to exhibit warmth as you make your exit—let them know how much you have enjoyed talking, and that you hope to see them again soon. You should know by now whether asking the digits or setting another time to meet will yield positive results.

4. start the conversation

It may sound simple, but it's often the single most important step toward seduction. Starting the conversation opens the door for something real to manifest. So why is it so hard?

Before we talk to someone, we often imagine all of the ways it could go wrong. For a smooth first interaction, take a few deep, slow breaths and clear your mind of clutter. Imagine a moment when you felt tranquil and free, without a hint of anxiety. Instead of delivering pre-formulated lines, say something honest and relevant to the moment. Let them know by your smile that you are comfortable with yourself, no matter what their reaction might be.

6. eye contact

It is impossible to flirt effectively without eye contact. The amount of psychic energy exchanged during five seconds of eye contact can easily be worth five minutes of conversation.

Some people overdo eye contact, sending a message that is overbearing and uncomfortable. Knowing when to look away and when to meet eyes is an art form, and a key to flirting effectively. Eye contact is a spiritual connection that can range from effortless to intense. The point is to build a mutual level of comfort with the object of your desire, rather than shying away or staring too much.

Angels during the Holidays

Suzy, featured psychic

Some of my fondest memories are going to the Midnight Mass Service with my family and singing the carols. It's only when I have been to my local church service that I feel Christmas has arrived. Also watching It's a Wonderful Life and The Wizard of Oz reminds me of Christmas. I always seem to find more white feathers around Christmas time, which is the angels' way of telling us they are around.

On one occasion I went to a Christmas Bazaar and a lady came up to me and said that she had something special for me. She told me that she was aware I was psychic and that she wanted to give me a little present to thank me for helping so many people. She gave me a rare Tiger's Eye pendant. I had never met this lady before, but felt that I had known her. I thanked her for the present and she just smiled at me. I went to some other stalls and when I came back to her stall she had disappeared—there was another lady at the stall. I asked this lady where her colleague was, and she told me that she didn't have a colleague and that she had been at the stall all morning! All I can say is that there must be angels amongst us and they come to us in many ways.
