The psychic world of Geoffrey Rush

by barney battles

Despite his distinct, weathered appearance, Geoffrey Rush has an uncanny ability to vanish into his characters. To do this, he relies on an almost supernatural ability to direct attention beyond his earthly form and to make contact with a character on deeper, psychic level.

Rush was born in Australia on 6th July 1951, placing him under the Western sign of Cancer and the Chinese sign of the Rabbit. This is a potent combination—perhaps even too potent for one man to bear. He began his career as an actor when he was spotted in a University production by a talent scout for the Queensland Theatre Company. He worked there four years, appearing in over 17 plays. However, rather than continuing to work as an actor, in 1975 Geoffrey decided to study mime, movement and theatre at the famous Lecoq School in Paris. What would inspire an actor to stop his career and seek out training at this point?

The answers lie in Geoffrey's star signs. Many people take Cancerians at face value, failing to see past their protective shell. This shell can take many forms, from a dour and impenetrable demeanour to a bright and colourful facade. The shell exists to protect an inner core that is sensitive and riddled with insecurity.

The Rabbit is much different. He is able to distance himself from a situation and weigh the pros and cons, but often at a ponderous pace. After his early success, Geoffrey's crab would have been causing him to question his abilities. For many Cancerians, this would have resulted in a change of career, but the rabbit caused Geoffrey to step back and appease the crab's worries through study.

Geoffrey's gift for being able to psychically project a character into the mind of his audience is rooted in his Western star sign. Born between July 4th and July 12th, Geoffrey is a second Decan Cancerian. These crustaceans are blessed with strong emotional intuition that allows them to 'read' and understand those around them. In addition, second Decan Cancerians are imbued with powerful psychic abilities. Geoffrey used the two abilities in tandem, using his intuition to assemble characters that are true to life, and to communicate their feelings on a higher plane. However, generating this level of psychic energy requires stamina and commitment, which can take its toll. While the crab is able to use these abilities, they will wallow in doubt as to whether they are doing it successfully. Those claws can be used to cling onto age-old insecurities as well as fend off attack.

Psychic burnout

In Geoffrey's case, he is unable to fully let go of his feelings of inadequacy. This puts further strain on his psychic reserves. In times of stress, the Rabbit will run for cover, trying to get as far away from a situation as possible. For Geoffrey, this produced a terrible conflict. Each time he entranced an audience with his psychic energies, his inner crustacean was plaguing him with doubt while his rabbit prompted him to escape. Ultimately, this resulted in a psychic burnout for Rush. One of the most profound effects was the experience of stage fright. "I think I hit a brick wall...and experienced a kind of series of pretty frightening panic attacks that would seemingly come out of nowhere. It happened twice on stage...I saw the exit sign at the back of the theatre and left."

Geoffrey's light-hearted assessment that getting "an international film career" cured him may be more truthful than he realises. Ultimately, both of his signs are great seekers of praise. They are almost defined by the amount of love they experience in life. For an actor, the process of filmmaking is less psychically demanding than that of live theatre. Rather than having to sustain higher energies for hours at a time, they are required to access them in small bursts. Combined with long-deserved recognition, these conditions will have undoubted appeal to both his Chinese and Western signs. However, neither the crab nor the Rabbit like to admit defeat and it should not be long before we see Rush returning to the stage. When this happens, he will careful to ensure that he only taxes himself to the limit—and not beyond.

"I often thought I was in the wrong business. I had been through a bad period of stress-induced anxiety."

Aries (Mar 21 - Apr 19)

The storms you've recently weathered on the high seas of love will break this month.

If you're single and frustrated, you stand an excellent chance of meeting someone special before the 14th. In the second half of the month, it will be difficult to connect—but don't worry, your love energy has shifted and new opportunities will continue to arise. Existing partners must be honest about an imbalance between them, and strive to correct it. An extracurricular activity, such as night school or regular trips to a club, is at odds with your domestic life. Something has to give, but you have the power to choose what.

Taurus (Apr 20 - May 20)

Your business and financial luck is strong, but there are hidden energies at play. Someone out there is less than thrilled about the idea of your success. Their emotions are acting as an energetic block. This may be someone in your social circle who isn't being completely honest with you about how they feel. It's best to wait a few weeks before making any big decisions, but a good result is certain as long as you are patient and fair. In the meantime, staying healthy is a great way to pass the time. Anything involving the outdoors is especially good for your body and spirit right now.

Gemini (May 21 - June 21)

If you have any speaking engagements after the 14th, an extra rehearsal won't hurt. Your tongue isn't its usual self when Mercury turns retrograde, but if you can find a way to be honest and funny about your sudden trouble with words, then it can work to your advantage. A friend or family member, meanwhile, is trying to dissuade you from moving in a new direction. Of course, listening to your heart is always best—but in this case, he or she makes some very good points. Consider them carefully before moving forward. If you're single, prospects appear in serious places—perfect for making a joke.

Horoscopes July 2012

Mercury and Uranus turn retrograde in a month were the little things matter more than usual.

Libra (Sept 23 - Oct 22)

If you're involved in any kind of training or schooling, now is the time to shine. A spike of mental power has you working on a high level, but there's a catch—you get a little foggy with respect to your ordinary responsibilities. This is especially true when Mercury goes retrograde in the middle of the month. In the midst of the more inspiring things going on in your world right now, the remedial tasks are easy to overlook. Be careful especially about forgetting a good friend. Set extra reminders if you have to, and take a few minutes each day to scan your mind for anything you may be missing.

Scorpio (Oct 23 - Nov 21)

A good rule this month is that if you can help someone, do it—especially when it does not look like anyone will notice. Your rewards may not be immediately apparent, but the universal energies that connect us together will respond. The Mercury retrograde starting on the 14th is most likely to cause trouble at the workplace, so another good rule is to double-check things at work. E-mail is one of the easiest ways to miscommunicate, so adding a dash of pleasantry to your correspondence won't hurt. A sudden new attraction lacks substance, but if you take things slow, it just might turn into something more.

Sagittarius (Nov 22 - Dec 21)

Conditions for love are just right. An ongoing partnership reaches the next level of intimacy, but delusions about home life must be addressed. New love is obtainable through freedom of expression. The more in tune you are with your creative vibes, and the more willing you are to channel them into the world, the more likely you will meet someone incredibly special. So if you're looking for that romantic connection, find where your creative energy is pent up and start there. If you're taking a trip, travel insurance isn't a bad idea. Mercury's retrograde, starting on the 14th, makes for a bumpy road.

Cancer (June 22 - July 22)

When galaxies meet, they dance until they eventually become one. In a similar way, the emotional demands of everyday life are pulling against your search for deeper meaning. These two elements are looking to come together, but it's no small feat. Be patient and compassionate with yourself. Not only is your psychic self elevating your daily activities, your daily activities are grounding and stabilizing your psychic self. The Sun is in your sign most of the month, providing a bright source of strength as your energies balance and evolve. A partnership will be put under stress, and most evolve too.

Leo (July 23 - Aug 22)

There is plenty of socializing and Summer fun in the mix, but something is missing. Could it be that deeper spiritual impulse, the desire to connect on a profound level? All of the materials needed to form this connection are readily available to you, it's just a matter of carving out more space for yourself. Cancelling an appointment or two might well be worth it, if you can use that time to look within and ask deep questions. Talk to a close friend or lover—they can put things in perspective. But ultimately, the stars want to enhance your ability to listen to your heart.

Virgo (Aug 23 - Sep 22)

There are two basic ways of gathering knowledge and information. Your sign is famous for being good at the first way, which is through study and straightforward absorption. It is the other way—gathering knowledge about people and things through pure feeling—that you sometimes have trouble with. Intuition is a paradox, in that your understanding of it expands in proportion with your trust in it. The point is, wherever you are with intuition, you're about to get even better. In order to see that logic and intuition are not as different as they seem, just look at the deep field of space.

“In order to see that logic and intuition are not as different as they might appear, look at the deep field of space.”

Capricorn (Dec 22 - Jan 19)

Look back at your new year's resolutions and ask yourself—how am I doing? Chances are, you are doing better than most. Your impulse toward a healthy, harmonious routine continues to have far-reaching effects, even though you have your down days. A planned change in your home life is delayed after the 12th, due to the retrograde of Uranus. Perhaps this needs a little more thought. Work, on the other hand, is not something you have to stop and think about. You have more energy in this department than you know what to do with—provided you keep that healthy lifestyle going.

Aquarius (Jan 20 - Feb 18)

Your chances for a Summer fling—if that's something you're interested in—couldn't be better. If you're committed, why not shake things up with your partner? The only problem is that Mercury will go retrograde on the 14th, making communication difficult. You might even get mixed up about meeting places and have to deal with some hurt feelings, but don't worry too much about it. Your positive energy and sense of humour are contagious, and will win out in the end. In professional matters, success is probable, but you must earn the trust of someone who isn't on your list of favourite people.

Pisces (Feb 19 - Mar 20)

Quite a few people want to know what's going on in that head of yours, but you are tired of answering questions. That's okay—actions speak louder than words. When you don't know what to say, do something instead—something that shows your intentions, your care, and your respect for a given person. Or if necessary, something that shows you are not afraid to look out for your own interests. The perception you have of yourself, and the perception you think others have of you, are actually one and the same. All the good luck in the world is really as simple as knowing you are worthy of it.

Is Your Partner Controlling?

In good relationships, there is a certain amount of psychic 'wrestling'. This is entirely natural and, in a stable relationship, part of the support that each partner offers the other. However, sometimes the power can be entirely one-sided. In this case, the problem must either be addressed or the relationship must end.

Those who seek to dominate in a relationship have often suffered rejection in the past and are unable to deal with it. For most of us, the possibility of rejection is a normal part of any relationship. It is never pleasant, but it is something we learn to handle and live with. Our psychic selves are able to look at the bigger picture.

For those whose psychic selves operate through fear, the wider perspective is lost and rejection becomes an event of enormous proportions. As a result, they seek to control future relationships and remove the possibility of rejection. If you think your partner is suffering from control issues of this sort, there are five simple tests you can carry out:

GIFTS

Many controlling types lavish gifts on their partners as a manifestation of their psychic insecurity. In essence, they believe they are not good enough for you, so use gifts as a way to ensnare you. If your partner is constantly bombarding you with expensive gifts, reject one of them. A controlling type will take this as a personal insult.

ARGUMENTS

Controllers will often throw back your own words in a different form and out of context. This is to undermine your faith in yourself and encourage your dependency on them. Mention that you believe this to be controlling behaviour. They might suggest it is you who are the controlling one. The psychic shield of a controller is designed to reject any accusations of this sort, without discussion or consideration.

FRIENDS AND FAMILY

Keep an eye on your other relationships. Controllers like to isolate their partners, so that theirs is the only show in town. Although controllers are able to exert a strong psychic influence on one person, they find it difficult to spread their powers over a crowd. Talk to friends and get their opinions.

YOUR NEEDS

Many controllers use their psychic power to try and define their partner's reality. For example, if you were to complain that you are tired, your partner might respond that it's all in your imagination. Controllers know that by undermining your experiences and needs, your psychic self will lapse into self-doubt and, ultimately, look to the controller for answers. These affirmations that you are wrong and that you don't know yourself may be subtle at first, but are likely to grow over time.

PHYSICAL SYMPTOMS

If a controlling personality senses that their partner may be pulling away from them, they can develop symptoms such as back pain, migraines and stomach upset. These are designed to appeal to your sympathetic, nurturing side and lure you back into the relationship. While these symptoms are psychosomatic, the controller is likely to believe they are real, and even to blame you for them. They will argue that you created the stress that has brought on these symptoms.

Healing a controlling personality is a difficult process. You can never be sure whether they are owning up to the problem or playing further psychic games. The true test is getting a controller to agree to some form of long-term therapy. In this situation, they will have to embrace their worst fear—giving up control and showing themselves to be vulnerable. This healing takes time. A sudden and miraculous change, unfortunately, is likely to be just another tactic.

5 ways to boost your INTUITION

There will always be a big place in this world for the rational mind—but there are things it simply cannot do.

—by barney battles

Commit Your Intuition to Paper

Monitor your intuition by keeping a journal. Write down the decisions you have to make and record your intuitive responses. When the decision has been made, record whether your intuition was helpful or unhelpful. This will give you an idea of your intuitive strengths and weaknesses.

Learn to Trust Your Sixth Sense

As your intuition develops, you will become attuned to its presence. Initially, this might feel a bit strange or unsettling. Most of us are used to making decisions using logic and reason. However, these are not always the best tools to use in a given situation. Sometimes, your inner advisor will have better advise, even if logic says otherwise.

Invite Intuition into your Life

The moment of waking, when your subconscious is returning to its quiet state, is a perfect time to invite your intuition into your daily activity. Begin by making a positive affirmation that your intuition is a sense that you want to benefit from. This can be as simple as saying to yourself, "I am grateful for my sense of intuition and I want it to reach its full potential."

Make Strong Affirmations

After time, you will notice subtle changes in the way you think. This is your sixth sense bubbling away just below the surface. You can encourage it to even greater heights by repeating your affirmation at various points during the day; perhaps when you have a few moments of solitude or just before you have to make a decision. Remember to make your affirmation positive.

Consult Your Sixth Sense

Whenever you have a decision to make, see if your intuition is aligned to your consciousness. First look at it from a conscious and logical aspect, and then from your gut feeling. If the two are not in agreement, take the time to examine the feelings of unease that your intuition is feeding you with.

WHEN DID YOU FIRST REALISE YOU WERE PSYCHIC?

It was probably when I began to trust that I was reliably picking up things I couldn't possibly know on a conscious level. That was in my late teens when I realised this was something real and tangible, not just a series of lucky guesses! I was also lucky to have two relatives who were interested in psychic phenomena, so their support was a turning point as well. From that point onwards, I started to develop my skills in earnest, reading lots of books and learning to apply good practice. Joining the local Spiritualist Church was very significant to my development too.

TELL US ABOUT A MEMORABLE EXPERIENCE WITH A CLIENT.

Oh yes! I've been lucky to have read for lots of lovely clients over the years, but there have often been some real stand-out times where something or someone really profound comes through. It's occasions like that, where you get something particularly meaningful for a customer, which are the ones I enjoy most of all. These can often be quite thought-provoking for me too as the fullness of such experiences still amazes me, despite working with spirit for such a long time!

WHAT MAKES A GOOD PSYCHIC READING?

I'd say a good reading comes from two angles; on the client side, a sincere desire and openness to connect and learn from whatever comes through for them at that time, as well as a good, well-attuned reader to bring through and filter what is most important for their client.
