He is notoriously private, but a peek at his astrological signs gives insight into one of Hollywood's most enduring icons.

For many, Sean Connery will always be the definitive James Bond - suave, sophisticated and with a smouldering sense of danger. He was voted Sexiest Man of the Century in 1999 and announced his retirement from acting in 2004.

Connery was born on the 25th August 1930, making him a Virgo born in the Chinese Year of the Horse. In some senses, it seems that he was born to play James Bond. His Western astrological profile is one of cool courage. Connery was born under the sign of the Virgin, with the Sun in conjunction with Neptune and Pluto in ascension. Pluto's influence is one of power and strategy, usually associated with politicians. This could have had a strong bearing on Connery's affiliation with the Scottish National Party in later life. Connery is a fiercely proud Scotsman and has stated his desire to see the country become independent. Indeed, he has sworn never to live there again until that is the case.

Idols and heroes

Neptune is the symbol of idols and heroes - things that Connery has come to represent to his millions of fans around the world. When Neptune is in conjunction with the Sun, another aspect is thrown into play; a connection to dreams, fantasies and alternate realities. It seems that both Pluto and Neptune governed Connery in his decision to become an actor. He was pursuing a career in football when the strategist in him realised that footballers' life spans do not continue much beyond the age of 30: "I was already 23. I decided to become an actor and it turned out to be one of my more intelligent moves."

Virgo is the cool, calm sign of the zodiac, defined by their ability to be rational and practical, even under pressure. As Bond, Connery certainly radiates a measured intensity and when he is in the public eye this quality informs his carriage and demeanour. However, this disciplined exterior is borne out of a desire for perfection. Virgos are extremely critical of that which does not meet with their exacting standards. This desire to attain the unattainable means that many Virgos are burdened with a sharp temper - something that Connery has become known for, especially in later life. Indeed, it may be the knowledge that perfection is an impossibility that has caused him to eschew the film industry. Apparently, he was so disappointed with his last films and so disenchanted with "Hollywood idiots", that he vowed never to return to the silver screen.

Underlying currents of self-doubt

As a Horse, Connery's cool facade will mask an underlying current of self-doubt. Horses are cunning rather than intelligent and this self-knowledge makes them feel insecure. That is not to say that Horses are stupid, but rather that they rely on their wits and instinct as opposed to academic facts. Coming from a working class family, Connery left school at the age of 13 to start a milk round. While he had little choice other than to leave education, it may be that his lack of academic grounding may prey on Sir Sean. This also could be another contributing factor to his quick temper; Horses may appear solid, stable animals but when they kick out, it is a powerful and sudden act.

Horses are also defined by their desire for independence, which often manifests itself as nonconformity. Becoming an actor would not have been the most conventional of career choices for someone of Connery's era and background. Most of his friends would have gone on to labouring jobs or into the armed forces. Connery's decision was partly informed by a duodenal ulcer that prevented a career in the Navy, but also will have fulfilled the equine fantasies of his Eastern star sign.

Survival Instincts

Both of Connery's star signs are imbued with a strong instinct for survival; the Horse can turn tail and run, while the maiden is driven to succeed, no matter what the cost. Sir Sean will have relied on both these qualities during his early career and, perhaps surprisingly, in his later career too. As he started out, Connery will have listened to the Virgin, making the decision to succeed against the odds. In the latter stages of his career, the Horse will have informed him to leave the industry and maintain his independence.

Perhaps the most surprising aspect of Connery's astrological signs is that they are both blessed with an acute sensitivity when it comes to reading other people. While this may not be something normally associated with the cold-hearted womaniser James Bond, many other of his screen performances have revealed him to be an actor of profound depth, conveying a range of emotions with minimal effort.

As Sir Sean enters his ninth decade, he must be wary of his health - particularly problems associated with the eyes and intestines. Virgo is particularly vulnerable to stress-related conditions, partly as the result of the continual turmoil bubbling away beneath that smooth, suave exterior.

Aries (Mar 21 - Apr 19)

The year may have gotten off to an introspective start, but fireworks fly this month when revolutionary Uranus makes its way into your fiery sign. This is a big shift in emphasis, namely toward personal freedom. Suddenly you have the urge to break free of constraints, and routine doesn't do it for you at all. The upside is, you have the motivation to clear the decks and make positive changes. And the risks? Well, Uranus in your sign is not particularly inclined toward moderation or careful planning. Keep that in mind and you'll see real transformation this month.

Taurus (Apr 20 - May 20)

There are two impulses competing for your attention. One tells you to buck the trend and do something totally new and unexpected, like take a sudden trip. The other tells you to travel deeply within yourself for spiritual healing, transformation, and clarity in your everyday life. The cards are stacked in favour of the former, and you'll see a lot of action with friends, networks and new opportunities. Stay in tune with your deeper self as you mingle and explore, and don't lose touch with the truth that your outer world reflects your inner world.

Gemini (May 21 - June 21)

The ideas just keep popping as Uranus enters your social and 11th house. Your head is buzzing with possibilities, and people are attracted to the upward movement of your spirit. However, you must be careful with your friendships. Not everything floats as easily as you, and the potential for misunderstandings and hurt feelings is strong; pay close attention to what others are saying. The career area of your chart is full of dynamic energy, and will readily conspire with your creative mental state to bring forth new possibilities on the work front.

Libra (Sept 23 - Oct 22)

It's all about you this month, Libra. Well, mostly about you. The Sun, Mercury, Venus and Uranus are all moving through your house of health and discipline. Last month's fast and loose policy is history as a new force of personal growth takes root. Spring cleaning is definitely in the air, on all the levels of your being. Dietary cleanses and physical movements like yoga and Tai Chi are begging you to answer the call! At the same time, matters on the home front take a turn for the emotional, and could get heated. A partner or trusted friend will offer their hand, and you'll need the support.

Scorpio (Oct 23 - Nov 21)

The partnership area of your chart has you magnetized and ready for action, whether you're currently attached or not. The problem is, carefree pleasures are more attractive than ever, while the need for stability is also at a premium. How do you reconcile these two influences? Take a deep breath and start with what you already have, and things will sort themselves out. You are fiercely loyal by nature, and your sense of justice is acute. Chances are, you'll be able to do right by everyone involved, even if temptation is not easy to pass up. Watch for impulse spending amidst all this excitement.

Sagittarius (Nov 22 - Dec 21)

Home and family, finance, roots and traditions will demand a great deal of energy and attention this month. These things are not always your cup of tea, when there are whole universes out there to be explored. Bring your adventurous spirit into these areas of your life and the rewards will be obvious. New love interest is highly likely with expansive Jupiter and revolutionary Uranus lighting up your fifth house of flings and pleasures. Keep it real and don't set anybody - including yourself - up for a fall, because this attraction is fickle and may well go the way of the dinosaurs.

Cancer (June 22 - July 22)

You've been dragging your heels at work, and for good reason: Something has to give. It may not be as serious as a job change (though it is possible), but create an emotionally healthy environment at the workplace is a key point this month, especially after Uranus changes signs on the 12th. Recreating your work space, learning new stretches and meditations to use during short breaks, and overhauling your lunch plan to include healthier and easier options, will all benefit you tremendously. If you're looking for love, someone is watching you, and if you're committed, don't wait to do something special.

Leo (July 23 - Aug 22)

It's a good time to grab a partner if you don't have one already, as romantic Venus enters your 7th house of partnerships. It will likely be someone unusual who represents things and experiences that are new and exciting to you. You are going on a ride whether a partner follows or not, and changes are happening on a deep spiritual level. There may even be some challenging lessons due to a cluster of planets in your mysterious and spiritual 8th house, but these challenges have great rewards. Be careful with words, as Saturn moving retrograde in your third house will create a lack of verbal prudence.

Virgo (Aug 23 - Sep 22)

You are like a mad scientist this month, Virgo, concocting new formulas for a more fulfilling life. Uranus makes a big transition to your house of health and routine, where Jupiter is already hard at work. These two forces enhance your ability to find creative solutions at work and in daily life. The full moon on the 19th falls in your sign - who knows, you just might have a breakthrough! Remember, the great experiment is the whole movement of your life. If you find creative ways to increase your happiness, productivity and inner clarity this month, you will have done the stars proud.

Spring cleaning is definitely in the air, on all levels of your being. Dietary cleanses and practices like yoga are key.

Capricorn (Dec 22 - Jan 19)

Domestic changes are a certainty this month as Uranus rides into your fourth house. This may bring something as major as a change of residence, or something less drastic like a sudden breakage that needs repair, or the irresistible urge to buy that high def TV. Home life will have a personal flavour too, as tension develops between your independent self and your role as a partner or family member. The tension will only be resolved when you find a way for your new direction to coexist with life at home. It's a great month to do something for your outward appearance and allow it to refresh your self-confidence.

Aquarius (Jan 20 - Feb 18)

The big news involves the planet Uranus, one of the rulers of your sign. When it enters your third house of networks and communications on the 12th, you are geared up for social action and collective change. This is already an important part of who you are, and Uranus gives you a major dose of inspiration. However, this is a much better month for planning and writing things down than manifesting them in the real world. That will come later. For now, focus on preparing for action, in whatever fields are important to you. Don't fret about recent money issues - they will level out by the middle of the month.

Pisces (Feb 19 - Mar 20)

With the passing of the Winter comes a shift from inner to outer, and your sign is full of planets to accentuate this. Sun, Mars, Mercury and Uranus all move through your sign. This is about you, your personal appearance, your friendships and relationships, and the way you present yourself to the world. The first months of the year have seen you turning away from negative influences in your world, but as you will learn this month, it takes persistence. Someone will surely appear to ensnare you in the same old things. Luckily, you have a host of planets in your sign, to keep you centered in who you are and focused on where you're going.

Lessons in Online Love

It can be scary, but there are methods to increase your chances of finding the partner you want.

♥ Listen to your psychic self

In traditional courtship, you can quickly get a sense of whether the person you are dating is right for you or not. While the conscious mind is busy weighing up the pros and cons of physical attraction and assessing personality traits such as a sense of humour, the subconscious is on full alert, reading body-language and picking up subtle, psychic signals from the person you are dating. With online dating, much of these conventions are removed: you cannot truly judge someone's appearance from a photograph and the subtle physical and psychic interplay that occur on a date are hidden behind a screen. All you really have to work with is the information that person gives to you in an email or SMS message. These constraints may frustrate your conscious mind, but your psychic self is a much more far-reaching tool.

💬 Be honest about who you are

The temptation for many dating site users is to project an image of themselves that purely plays on their best qualities. While this is also true in traditional dating scenarios, the psychic self has an easier job of discerning fact from fiction. It is better that you are honest about who you really are and what you want. That way, you will attract like-minded people.

Of course, the real litmus test of your judgements will come when you choose to meet a person you have been corresponding with. You may feel that you have established a good rapport up to this point but, once again, it is better to trust in your innate psychic instincts to tell you whether or not the person you have met is all they claim to be.

🔮 Visualise your dream date

Giving some attention to the sort of person you would like to date is a good place to start. Many people spend more time considering the next car they would like than the person they want to be involved with. Take some time to meditate and try to visualise your dream date. While it is entirely natural to focus on their appearance, try to include other aspects in your visualisations. Consider all facets of their personality and other factors that may be important to you such as their financial status and interests. This will prime your subconscious to recognise those types of people from the lists you are presented within a dating site.

In addition, creating a 'model' of your perfect partner will prime your psychic self to spot any inconsistencies in the messages you receive from prospective dates. In creating a model, your subconscious will use all the information it has collated about the way people behave, act and think and use this to provide you with a good or bad sense about the person you are communicating with.

Science and your Third Eye

The third eye has been known by many spiritual traditions around the globe for thousands of years, yet it is seldom acknowledged by mainstream science. However despite this, there is no shortage of scientific evidence to support its existence and power in our lives.

Hindus view the third eye as a chakra located in the forehead between the body's two physical eyes. The Hindu Scriptures known as the Upanishads describe it as a gateway to higher planes of consciousness, deep within the psyche. It is said to be responsible for intuition and extra sensory perception (ESP).

Experiments in ESP

While ESP has never been proved scientifically, many studies have given credence to its existence. Some of the first experiments were carried out by Dr. Joseph Banks Rhine in the 1920s and 30s. Decks of playing cards with precise symbols on them were utilised to gauge the ESP abilities within a subject. These symbols were a cross, a star, a circle, a square, and a wavy line. After the deck was shuffled, the subject would remove a card from the deck without looking, and place it face down on the table. He or she would then 'call' the card and this was recorded by the researcher, with the card remaining face down. This was repeated up to 25 times before the cards were turned over and checked against the calls made by the subject.

This scientific method worked by cross-referencing the number of correct guesses against the statistical probability of such results arising as a product of chance. The results were startling. One set of data showed that out of 2,400 calls, almost 500 correct guesses were recorded. The probability of these results being produced by chance were roughly one in a million. Of the 33 sets of similar experiments which Dr. Rhine carried out over the years, 27 were noted to be 'statistically significant.'

Despite a range of studies by other researchers which pointed to the presence of a sixth sense, ESP remained unacceptable to mainstream science. Eventually, few credible scientists were prepared to carry out research in the area for fear of jeopardising their careers and tarnishing their reputations with disbelieving colleagues and the international press.

Modern research into the third eye

More recently, an American biophysicist named Beverly Rubik has been conducting research into the 'biofield,' an unseen energy found within and around all living things. Ancient spiritual traditions have long known of the existence of this hidden life-force, and it has been known by many names.

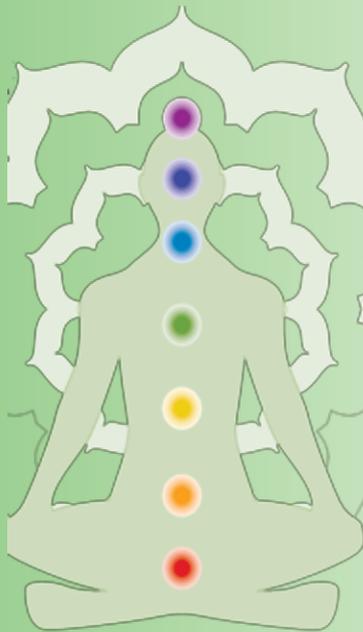

Rubik's research is more sophisticated than that of Dr Rhine, using high tech devices to measure brainwave activity. Subjects wear brainwave monitors which give detailed readouts of mental activity. Rubik has tested both 'normal' individuals and highly practised meditators, and the results are no less startling than Dr Rhine's findings.

She has found that those who meditate regularly are able to emit much higher frequency brainwaves than their layperson counterparts. Many of these experienced meditators were also found to constantly generate frequencies of 40 hertz in the portion of the brain where eastern traditions have located the third eye.

Science versus spirituality

Further research into the fields of clairvoyance, ESP, precognition and related phenomenon could well transform the common perception of the third eye from a fantasy to a core part of our innate being. It could also revolutionise how we view our place in the world as a species and a civilisation.

The problem is not a lack of individuals willing to study the phenomenon using rational scientific deduction, nor are we unable to detect the third eye using quantitative data and modern technological resources. The problem, rather, is the stubbornness of conventional science. Soon enough, the evidence for the existence of the third eye may build to a point where science can no longer brush it aside.

READER PROFILE SELINA

When did you first realise you were psychic?

A lady came to me looking to speak to someone who had passed over. Contact was made with this gentleman and evidence was given as to the spirit's identity. The lady confirmed that the man coming through was indeed that person who had sadly died in a car accident. I gave specific details to this lady of how the gentleman had passed over describing the car in great detail and she confirmed this to be true.

Have you had any memorable experiences reading for a client?

I was always very aware of spirit since the early age of seven years old, yet as I grew older I blocked these voices out and it wasn't until later on in life that I realised what these voices were. It was roughly twelve years ago that I found myself drawn very strongly to the paranormal, and brought my first pack of tarot cards. When I began playing with them strange things started to happen, I started to get premonitions and one time the attic door opened completely by itself!

What makes a good psychic reading?

A good psychic reading is made up of empathy, honesty and integrity, combine these with evidence of a connection with spirit and the connection you've established with the client. At the end of the reading I feel it's important to leave the client with more perspective, clarity and a sense of direction.
