Leo DiCaprio

He was just another kid from a broken home in the ghettos of East Hollywood, but this Scorpio shot to the top of Hollywood's A-list. Was his success written in the stars from birth? A closer look at the astrology reveals the answer.

KING LEO

He's got stunning looks and a staggering resumé. He's one of the world's leading environmentalists, and has the lead role in the groundbreaking psychic blockbuster, Inception. Leonardo's place in Hollywood royalty seems to be written in the stars - but is it?

Leonardo DiCaprio has led a charmed life, one that has led him from being just another child from a broken home in the poor crime ridden streets of East Hollywood to the top of Hollywood's A-list. His most recent film, the sprawling, dreamlike science fiction tale Inception, has cemented his place as one of the most respected, bankable and diverse actors of our age. Inception looks at the role that dreams and the subconscious play in our waking lives, and the film almost sees DiCaprio's character destroyed by his own subconscious desires and regrets. But how much of Leo's own path and the characteristics which have defined his career was written in the stars from his birth?

Leonardo DiCaprio was born on 11th November 1974, in an area of Los Angeles that he recalls as a 'ghetto'. His Zodiac sign of Scorpio gave him the strength to grow beyond the adversity that could have so easily have consumed his young life. Leo would later comment, "Seeing the devastation on my block, seeing heroin addicts, made me think twice about ever being involved in drugs. It's evil." This integrity at a young age is innate within those born under the sign of Scorpio. Scorpios can also be intensely creative and will actively seek an outlet to demonstrate this creativity, and this is what led Leo out of the ghetto and onto the road to success.

A spark of talent

When his parents separated, they nonetheless noticed the spark of talent and the innate intelligence within young Leonardo and signed him up with a talent agent when he was just a boy. From there he went on to star in a variety of TV commercials and programs for schools. While other children might have balked at the idea of this hard work in favour of playing with their friends or watching television, Scorpios are resolutely hard working, and this was clearly bubbling to the surface of the actor's personality even at such a young age.

It wasn't long before television producers also noticed this talent and Leo was soon receiving bit parts in a range of US sitcoms including the popular Rosanne. Soon he got his film debut in the ultra-low budget horror Critters 3, and though this was a relatively unsuccessful movie, it proved to be a notch in his belt that kept the acting work flowing in. The Tiger side of his personality may also have been a defining factor in his childhood success, as Tigers are known for their innate luckiness. This combination of luck and talent was the winning formula which would land Leo a role in 23 episodes of the sitcom Growing Pains. Though the program was axed the following year, the American public was beginning to take the intrepid young actor to their hearts.

An alluring personality

Scorpios have alluring personalities that many people find engaging and a keen intelligence that glistens in their eyes. This magnetic personality soon led to Leo being given supporting roles in major Hollywood movies, such as What's Eating Gilbert Grape and The Basketball Diaries. Yet the Tiger in Leo kept spurring him onto new challenges, and his competitive nature saw him beat his young rivals such as the ill-fated River Phoenix to major roles.

Being born in 1974, Leonardo DiCaprio is a wood Tiger, whose characteristics include the ability to work well with others and a stable personality. These traits supported his innate talent and made him a young actor that directors, producers and fellow actors were happy to work with.

1996 and 1997 were the years that the actor became a household name, with the release of the Hollywood modernisation of Romeo & Juliet and the box office record breaking Titanic respectively. Leo was soon to be found adorning the posters on many an adolescent girl's wall and his popularity snowballed. However after this brief flurry of intense fame, the actor retired from the limelight and was seldom seen in major pictures for a number of years, perhaps withdrawing into the secretive nature that Scorpios hold close to their heart. The Tiger within him may also have felt its fierce self-reliance challenged by the pressures of fame.

Yet Leo would return reborn five years later in 2002, with starring roles in Martin Scorsese's Gangs of New York, and opposite Tom Hanks in Catch Me If You Can. This rebirth signalled a new era in Leo's career, and the Tiger element that craves challenge would see him take on roles in a diverse range of highly selective films that would continue to boost his popularity. These included The Departed, Blood Diamond, Revolutionary Road and this year's Inception.

Good judges of character, Scorpios only work with those they deem to be worthy and honest, and this has undoubtedly guided Leo to work with high calibre directors such as Martin Scorsese, with whom he has collaborated numerous times. This in turn has seen his credibility rise and rise, and the poor Scorpio Tiger from the wrong side of Hollywood now has the world at his feet.

Aries (Mar 21 - Apr 19)

Money can't buy you love - in fact, it can sometimes stand directly in the way! Venus backtracking into your 7th house puts the spotlight on two areas: love and money. When you find that things aren't exactly as they seem, you'll have to walk on eggshells at first, and treat a delicate situation with patience and care. You're more at home being direct and open, and luckily, you won't have to work undercover for long. A major shift takes place on the 18th, when both Venus and mighty Jupiter turn direct. This will smooth the ruffled edges and show a clear path forward.

Taurus (Apr 20 - May 20)

Neptune finally turns direct in your career zone, meaning it's time to get real about what you really want. You may find that a territorial situation at the office becomes clear, and you will know exactly what to do. Or the realization may go deeper, as you realise it's high time to embark on a major career change. Your own Venus turns direct on the 18th, followed by a full moon in your sign on the 22nd, which brings an intense wave of emotional, psychic and even sensual energy. Don't be surprised if a mutual attraction pops up out of nowhere.

Gemini (May 21 - June 21)

Mercury spends the entire month in forward motion, and so should you! The Scorpio Sun makes a great time for you to strengthen good habits and do away with bad. Sounds simple, but it's easier said than done this month, as seductive Venus backs into your house of pleasures and has people doing double takes as you walk by. Temptations will fly at you left and right when you attempt to make a focused change, but nothing should steer you away from the things you truly want, especially when Jupiter resumes forward motion in your career zone on the 18th.

Two big planets - the kingly Jupiter and the visionary Neptune - turn direct this month, turning over a new leaf in psychic wellbeing and close friendships.

Libra (Sept 23 - Oct 22)

A bad hair day or two is nothing to worry about - avoid making drastic changes and overhauling your look, at least until later in the month. Your beloved Venus is backing up through your sign, which has you asking lots of questions and doubting whether you've got it together. This is only temporary - when she turns direct again on the 18th, you'll feel like your old beautiful self again. Two big planets are also resuming forward motion - Jupiter and Neptune - and in your case, this means a chance to see where your indulgences have been costing you, and how to replace them with healthy, healing habits.

Scorpio (Oct 23 - Nov 21)

You've been dealing with business as usual for what seems like ages, and this month is the right time to break out! You have the Sun, Mercury, and a new Moon in your sign, urging you to sweep out the cobwebs, touch up your personal appearance, and set things in order as you celebrate a birthday. The other major influence is Jupiter, which goes direct in your house of pleasures and diversions on the 18th. This sets your romantic sensors buzzing and sets the stage for a bit of mystery, drama and real-life intrigue. You'll be more than willing to play your part.

Sagittarius (Nov 22 - Dec 21)

Things have been off key at home for quite awhile, Sagittarius. This because your ruling planet Jupiter has been moving backwards through your house of home and family. Now then - constraint is always a formidable challenge to a freewheeling, adventurous spirit like yours, and you can't be blamed for letting it get to you, but don't despair - help is on the way! Jupiter straightens itself out on the 18th, as does Venus in your good-natured house of friendships. Once these new aspects settle into place, the pesky past will leave you be, and fresh company will guide you toward new horizons.

Cancer (June 22 - July 22)

Your financial situation has been unclear lately, probably due to a partner or associate who hasn't been telling you the whole story. Wait until after the 6th for the smoke to clear, and you'll find out what's really going on. Lingering situations will further benefit from a well-placed Mars, which gives you a fresh and energetic vantage point. Meanwhile, a trip or new romance - or even both together - suddenly becomes possible, but first you have to make sure an issue at home is settled. A new romantic interest might be just the inspiration you need to iron things out elsewhere in your life.

Leo (July 23 - Aug 22)

It's a month of strong emotions for you, Leo - certainly not a bad thing. But you'll have some difficulty getting your feelings across at first, no matter how clear they are to you. When communication breaks down, especially with a partner, or close friend, crank up the listening skills. Ask a lot of questions about them, and break the tension with an unusual diversion or day trip. This may seem out of place, as you normally find your element by standing directly in the spotlight, but never fear. When Venus turns direct on the 18th, you'll suddenly have them exactly where you want them - hanging on your every word!

Virgo (Aug 23 - Sep 22)

Your house of finance is burdened with Saturn - Mr. Sobriety himself - as well as a slightly baffling Venus retrograde. What does that mean? Now is the time to take thriftiness to a whole new level! As if you weren't capable enough in that department, a well-placed Sun and Mercury give you tons of ideas to cut costs and have fun while you're at it. In relationships, you've been feeling put out, but a major u-turn is in the works, thanks to magnificent Jupiter turning direct in your house of partnerships. Existing love is ready for a makeover, while new love, if you're up for it, shows its face in unexpected places.

Existing love is ready for a makeover, while new love, if you're up for it, shows its face in unexpected places.

Capricorn (Dec 22 - Jan 19)

Be wary of a friend who gets pushy with career advice - it may sound tempting, but all that glitters is not gold. Ask yourself, has this person's council been sound in the past? Likewise, financial decisions are off, at least until the 6th when Neptune turns direct and stops spinning a web of illusion in your house of money and resources - at which point it can become a great financial asset: vision. Along with that, your career continues to be well aspected, so put a little extra into your assignments and take networking opportunities wherever you can find them. By the month's end, a chance meeting may grow into a big deal.

Aquarius (Jan 20 - Feb 18)

As much as you love your freedom, the feeling of drifting aimlessly has been getting to you, thanks to a long Neptune retrograde in your first house. Yours is a sign of social causes and meaningful action, and you can't stand being idle. Well, you'll hit your stride early in the month, when Neptune goes direct. This restores your sense of direction and purpose, especially in the workplace. If you're looking for love, things are in a bit of logjam until later in the month, when a suggestive email or phone call with an associate will set the ball rolling. If an ex turns up wanting another chance, give it a think if you want to, but definitely don't jump headlong.

Pisces (Feb 19 - Mar 20)

If you just haven't felt like yourself lately, it's because your very own

Jupiter has been moving backwards through your sign. This powerful reversal has affected your moods, emotions, your social life - goodness, even your diet may have taken a slightly wrong turn! Keep your feet on the ground and fear not - all of this murky emotion can and will change as Jupiter moves forward again on the 18th, along with Venus in your psychic 8th house. On top of this, a busy 9th house of new horizons gives you the courage and direction to oxygenate all that has been sitting stagnant.

Five Ways to Boost Your Intuition

Sometimes it comes like a warning not to go out, get on that train, meet that person. At other times it can be a last minute decision to change direction, and we meet someone who becomes a catalyst of transformation in our lives. Here are five ways to boost intuition on everyday life.

1. Meditation

Meditation is our top tip. Taking the time to breathe slowly and deeply, and clear your mind of chatter, makes it more obvious when a 'hunch' appears. If your mind is calm and clear, you are far more likely to be aware of a different sensation or a thought that has come out of the blue and is not part of your logical thinking. In preparing to meditate, try this little exercise: Close the right nostril and breathe in through your left nostril only. This gives the intuitive right side of your brain an additional boost of oxygen and allows it to function better. Breathe in and out this way for about five or six breaths before continuing with long, slow, deep breathing through both nostrils. This will focus attention within, instead of the outside sensations that usually demand our attention. Try to meditate as often as possible; even five minutes every day is setting up a regular time to call upon your inner self to awaken.

2. Trust

Learn to explore any hunches you get, and trust your intuition – this is crucial to developing it. The more you begin to test and act on what you sense is the right thing to do, the sooner you will trust it. Once your intuition knows you are listening, it will work more successfully for you, becoming a natural flow that you can access at any time. Understand your intuitive ability as natural part of you. Remember that your thoughts and attitudes find reflection in the world. If you have spent years dismissing your instincts and hunches because they make no sense, your intuition is likely to remain hidden. Acknowledge that you have an intuitive self, which you need to reconnect with. Open up your mind's eye and be receptive to the seemingly impossible, the improbable and the new. Simply giving yourself permission to work with it will set it all in motion.

3. Practice

Practice guessing who is on the phone or door before you answer. Create a blank white screen in your mind's eye and look to see if an image appears of your caller. Trying to work with your intuition will wake it up. Guess what the next song on the radio will be and if you cannot find an object, such as your keys, try to see them on a blank white screen in your mind and gradually try to see the surrounding environment of the object. Using a divinatory tool such as tarot cards, runes, dowsing rods or crystal balls can also be useful aids in developing your intuition. Give yourself time to explore your hidden senses, awaken the subconscious, and strengthen your awareness of the inner self.

4. Be Happy!

Modern science now recognises the heart-mind connection and the fact that our emotional wellbeing encourages our physiological health and mental clarity. In other words, every part of our body is linked. If you act kindly and thoughtfully, approach challenging situations with an open mind and understanding, learn to give yourself time for the things that matter and develop your creativity – then you will be living what is called 'an authentic life' where your intuitive and inner self is in harmony with your conscious self. This can only lead to greater happiness and awareness rather than confusion, stress and depression – all of which can be huge blocks. Remember, your intuitive feelings must feel it's safe to come out!

5. Dream Diary

Our intuition is often dismissed by our conscious mind and consigned to the hidden realms of the subconscious, where it can surface as dreaming. Keeping a notepad and pen by your bed is a useful way of recording your dreams. Our dreams fade from our minds very quickly as our conscious mind takes control. The very act of recording dreams is a message to your conscious mind that you want to listen to your intuition. It is also a message to your intuition that you are listening.

Intimacy and Spirituality

What do intimacy and spiritual harmony have to do with one another? Life can take its toll on any relationship; stress, financial worries and the pressures of bringing up children can all conspire to drive a wedge between even the happiest of couples. The first signs of problems can manifest themselves in the bedroom; a partner may be too tired for intimacy, partners may find that they are not going to bed at the time and may even be actively avoiding intimate contact. Once a rut like this has begun, it is very important to break it. However, it should be understood that lack of intimacy is merely a physical symptom of distress on a higher, more spiritual level.

Great importance is attached to intimacy. It makes us feel wanted and needed and is a great release for all the stresses and tensions of the day. But it could be that too much importance is placed on the physical side of a relationship. Withdrawal of intimacy is a sign that a couple is becoming spiritually isolated from one another. And this can prove a harder rift to heal.

With any problem, there are two options - to fight it or to indulge it. The harder road is to be pro-active, but it is the only one that will give a couple any chance of recovery.

Spiritual isolation is more common than you might first think. With so much of our lives being dependent on computers and technology, it is all too easy to withdraw from human contact. The television replaces conversation, the Internet replaces the need for a social life and, very soon, couples can find they are living separate lives under the same roof.

Intimacy is the physical manifestation of spirits that are aligned and working in harmony, as are conversation and the sharing of experiences.

In order to establish contact on a spiritual level, both parties must set aside their physical desires and concentrate on rebuilding the ethereal bond that drew them together in the first place. While this may sound complicated, it can be achieved in many simple ways such as talking about the problems that have arisen. During these discussions, it is important that each party has the opportunity to hear and be heard. Through the simple act of talking, it may be that they come to realise that they are not as isolated as they first felt.

In addition, it is worth setting some time away from the technologies that, while they can help our lives, can also intrude upon them. Couples that set aside time for each other away from the distractions of life are far more likely to achieve a balanced relationship, both physically and spiritually. This needn't involve expensive restaurants. More can be achieved from taking a walk together in tranquil surroundings.

Physical intimacy is a major factor of any relationship, but it is only a corporeal way of expressing higher feelings. Spiritual intimacy is often referred to as 'the forgotten intimacy' as it is sometimes easy to forget that there are other aspects to a person than just their bodily form. Were we to pay as much attention to seeking spiritual intimacy as we do the physical, we might find that more marriages were prone to stand the test of time.

When did you first realise you were psychic?

My first recollection of a psychic experience was when I was about four years old. My mum was quite thrifty and when a button needed replacing on a piece of clothing there was usually a similar one in the box of buttons collected over the years. One day she was repairing a jacket and she asked me to find some similar buttons. When I put my hand in the box, I experienced strange emotional sensations, and heard noises as if a lot of people were speaking at once.

Obviously this frightened me but with time I realised that I could pick energy up off objects and as my understanding developed I could also read people's energies. I started using my mediumistic skills at about 12 years of age.

Have you had any great experiences with a customer who you have read for?

I think the greatest experience I can have with any client is when they report back to me that I was successful in outlining what would happen to them. Often times, they were experiencing a dark moment in their lives which seemed beyond hope and I was often met with incredulity when I predicted a winning outcome. I always thank my clients for such feedback, and remind them that Spirit and I only played a small role in their good fortune and the rest was accomplished by them. Another good reason for it being a great experience is that I sometimes need verification that my relationship with Spirit is a productive one.

What makes a good psychic reading?

A good psychic reading enables the client to believe in themselves and their ability to fashion the future rather than being a victim of fate. Anybody who has had a reading from me can attest that they are delivered with honesty and frankness. I try to give the sort of readings I would like to have myself. It would be so easy to sugar the pill by being too optimistic, but that would be a disservice to the client. Approaching the reading with an open mind also helps as it is too easy to assign what the reader says to a particular person or circumstance, and become blind to other possibilities.
