Lover or STALKER?

Most of us will have, at one time or another, read a story about a celebrity and their stalker. What is interesting about these stories is that the stalker often professes a deep love for their target. While most of us are familiar with being the object of someone's affections, few of us tend to believe that we have been stalked in any way. However, the line between love and obsession is a thin one and while it might be difficult to identify in everyday life, we do have other senses that can alert us to the intentions of others.

Intuition – a powerful tool

Intuition is a powerful psychic tool in discerning how someone may feel about us. When it comes to deciding whether a person is attracted to us, we have all experienced that feeling of excitement that travels almost like an electric charge between individuals. Aside from the physical signs such as body language, intuition gives us a 'feel' for someone. You may be aware that they are attracted to you on a physical level, but you can also intuit pretty quickly whether their intentions are flattering or worrying. A person whose intentions go beyond those that you are comfortable with will usually trigger a 'prickly' sensation - a 'gut feeling' that something is not as it should be. Rather than simply being a good guess, this is the result of your psychic antennae registering a potential threat.

Once the threat is registered, your subconscious can even influence the way your other senses work. You may find that you notice something peculiar about the way that person looks at you or you may hear something in their speech patterns that make you uncomfortable. The body is the physical manifestation of the spirit in all its aspects. If your psychic defences spot a potential stalker, they will adjust your physical senses to align with their judgement. Conversely, the reverse is also true. We have all experienced the sensory enhancement that comes with meeting someone to whom you are attracted. If there is no psychic threat, your spiritual side enhances the way they appear and sound to you.

The power of dreams

In addition to our ability to intuit, dreams are also a good measure of someone's psychic intent. You do not even have to engage with a person to be able to weigh them up. Psychically, a mere look will often be enough to trigger your spiritual antennae into action. Once they have made its assessment of someone, the subconscious retains that information and will feed it to you in the most effective way possible.

If your suitor is of good intent, the dreams you have will usually depict them clearly and in surroundings that hold some significance to you. This demonstrates that your subconscious has a good grasp of their character and is trying to determine where and how they will fit into your life. Dreams such as these are often accompanied by positive feelings.

However, if your antennae suspect someone of being obsessive or a threat, your subsequent dreams will be very different. People who pose a menace to your psychic well-being will often be depicted in dreams as indistinct, signifying that their own psychic defences are preventing you from fully reading them. In addition, it may be that the person is always just out of reach or distant, again highlighting their elusive nature. The surroundings of the dream, although not necessarily threatening, may be uncomfortable or claustrophobic, suggesting that the psychic signals sent by this person are oppressive and single-minded.

In order to get a good overall picture of the person whose attentions you have attracted, it is a good idea to develop your own psychic powers. By tuning into and accessing your subconscious, you will receive clearer messages about the person in question. Focussing on that person as you go to sleep is a good way of letting your subconscious speak for itself.

Meditation

Alternatively, meditation is another effective method of searching your psyche for answers. Again, focus on the person in question, before letting your mind drift. Your subconscious will recognise the question and answer it either through images or by provoking a gut feeling. It may also be worth keeping a diary to record your thoughts and feelings that arise from your psychic investigation. The more you flex your psychic muscles, the clearer an idea you will receive of just what your suitor intends.

While most of us have no idea how it feels to be a celebrity stalked by a fan, many of us encounter the potential to be stalked without even knowing it. What might be a good or bad feeling about someone is not to be ignored. Rather than being just a gut feeling, it is actually our psychic power alerting us to the possibility of a potential love or a potential threat.

Dynamic Denzel

by Derryck Strachan

Despite his fame as an actor, director, writer and film producer, very little is known about Denzel Washington. Of course, he has done his fair share of interviews to promote movies but during these interviews he employs a calm and measured approach and refuses to deviate into discussing his private life. While his on-screen personas can vary wildly according to the character he is playing, his off-screen demeanour gives very little away. By delving into Denzel's astrological signs, we may be able to create a more detailed picture of the man as he is when the cameras are off.

Denzel was born on the 28th December 1954, making him a Capricorn, born in the Chinese Year of the Horse. Capricorns are tireless workers, but with a firm view of the long game. It may well be that a Capricorn will attempt a goal that many others would balk at. Capricorns are determined to reach their aims, but do not worry about the time it takes to achieve them – good things come to those who wait. This would appear to be true of Denzel. After taking part in a staff talent show at a summer camp, someone suggested Denzel try acting. He promptly enrolled at the Lincoln Center Campus to pursue this idea and, upon graduation, attended the American Conservatory Theatre for a further year. Rather than becoming impatient, Capricorn's view of the bigger picture drew Denzel to study the intricacies and complexities of his craft in as much detail as possible. Possibly his Western star sign was able to intuit the shape of things to come and wanted to invest as much time as possible in preparing for it.

Capricorns are also very intellectual. This can manifest itself as a wisdom that seems beyond their years. For Denzel to pursue a career that relies very much on intuition might seem a contradiction, but consider which roles have made Denzel famous as an actor. Denzel is most recognized for his startlingly accurate portrayals of real-life figures such as Steve Biko, Malcolm X and Herman Boone. To create a fictional character, an actor must employ his imagination. To portray a real life person, an actor must rely on his intellect as well. No doubt that in preparing for these roles, Denzel's Capricorn side encouraged him to read as much reference material as possible to fully immerse himself in the role.

The Horse, however, is likely to be the side of himself that Denzel keeps private. Horse people are notoriously lacking in confidence and constantly crave assurance. The flighty nature of this sign will not allow him to take anything for granted and even having received three Golden Globes and two Academy Awards will not be enough to make him fully accept his gifts. In some respects, this might make him appear to be a humble man, but Horses are possessed of huge egos that need feeding. It is possible that, away from the cameras, Denzel is a man who constantly questions whether he is good enough at what he does. In order to prove himself, he will keep coming back for more, each time trying to better his last offering.

Horses can be perceived as having a flighty nature, but this is because they are always on the lookout for spiritual nourishment. A project that might appear to offer some satisfaction can lose its interest if another, more psychically rewarding opportunity comes along. However, Denzel seems to have mastered his Equine sign in this department. He is a committed Christian and has given large sums of money to the building of churches. Having nourished his Horse's spiritual appetite, Denzel will be able to take life at an easy trot, rather than breaking into a gallop at the drop of a hat.

Many of Denzel's characters are passionate, fiery men. Given his calm, almost placid demeanour, it is a puzzle as to how Denzel is able to harness such emotional intensity. This must be attributed to his Horse, for they are very emotional creatures, prone to displays of deep feeling. However, it may be that Denzel is also attuned to his Western sign to such a degree that he is able to use Capricorn's patience to capture these emotions and use them when they are most necessary. This doesn't mean that Denzel is an unfeeling and calculating man. Rather, it means that he has a great awareness of his own depth of feeling and to fully understand something is to be able to control it. Denzel's compelling intensity on the screen is born out of his ability to understand himself and his emotional capabilities. Rather than wasting them in pointless displays of temper he uses them to great effect, purging himself at the same time.

Denzel's ability to appear calm and measured is no act. He is a man psychically at ease with himself, yet able to draw on his emotional reserves when the time is right.

Aries (Mar 21 - Apr 19)

Your partnership zone is a flurry of activity, the main event being a Sun-Saturn conjunction.

This puts a prime on hard work in relationships. Your differences cannot be eliminated - they must be mastered and harmonised if the relationship is to grow. Mercury lends a hand as it strides into your relationship scene on the 4th, and stays present until the 21st to ensure that communication is effective. Meanwhile, your ruling planet Mars is teamed up with Venus to give your sexual side a shot of double espresso. With all the relationship work you are doing, things could get interesting when the lights go out.

Taurus (Apr 20 - May 20)

What's wrong with being irresistible? This month is so charged with sensuality and sizzle that you may be struggling just to keep your wits about you, and your love interests will be even more befuddled than you are. New attractions are likely to come on fast and strong, whilst existing relationships stand to benefit greatly from an intimate boost. Watch out for impulsive spending, and make sure your abundance of creative energy has a few different constructive outlets. You'll need them, lest an overload causes you to blunder.

Gemini (May 21 - June 21)

You feel a bit limited in your self-expression, and your ability to enjoy yourself is slightly hampered. Why exactly? The heavy influence of Saturn is fused with the Sun in your pleasure and romance house, and this is making you less footloose and fancy free. Don't worry - it's only temporary, and things will go well at work in the meantime, especially if you use your charm and punctuality on your colleagues. Do little things to beautify and harmonise the environment for the benefit of everyone present, and put everything you can into your performance. This will pay big dividends later, when your breezy old self comes back.

CAREER LOVE SPIRIT DESTINY

Astrologer & Shaman

Mars and Venus team up to form a potent romantic force, but Venus turns retrograde early in the month, setting the mood for re-evaluation and change.

Libra (Sept 23 - Oct 22)

Your words and actions are utterly symphonic this month as the Sun, Saturn, and Mercury pass through your sign, augmented by a Libran new Moon on the 14th. This is enough to make more than a few people gawk, but don't take it the wrong way; they are simply enjoying the music. What could go wrong when you are in a groove like this? Well, the positive, life-affirming vibes running through you could lead to some extravagant spending. Keep frugality close to your heart and remember that beauty in its highest aspect transcends the physical - a useful thing to understand in hard times.

Scorpio (Oct 23 - Nov 21)

A power surge can be channeled to create amazing results, or it can blow the fuse. Dealing with potent forces is a challenge, but a lucky one for you, as your nature invites intensity. Your own planet Mars is in your sign along with stunning and beautiful Venus. The Sun is not far behind, due to enter your sign on the 23rd. The magnetism that you feel can act like a boomerang to fetch you what you want, especially in terms of love. It can also cause people to get the wrong message, and this is likely to happen, even if you haven't been careless. When this happens, wait until they send you a clear message before you send one back.

Sagittarius (Nov 22 - Dec 21)

Things are little rough at home this month, as Jupiter backpedals through your house of family and roots. You have been carrying your weight in this department, but you may just have to carry a little more. A free-spirited explorer like you does not care much for restraints, and when your home and family start to feel a bit cagey, the temptation is to run away. Yet these things can and must be actively addressed. If there is anyone with rigid ideas about you and your life, be firm in letting them know who you are. There is more than one friend who understands you - turn to them for support in dealing with pesky issues from the past.

Cancer (June 22 - July 22)

There is a tug of war going with responsibilities of home and family on one side, and your burning need to de-stress and enjoy yourself on the other. The problem is, neither side can be excluded for the sake of the other, not this month anyway. Fortunately, the Moon is aptly placed to give you a trustworthy compass, showing you which side needs more attention on a given day, and what sorts of activities and gestures will work holistically on the big picture. Romantically, someone will either send you signals of interest, or mistakenly think that such signals are coming from you, so stay sharp!

Leo (July 23 - Aug 22)

Your words have amazing power this month, as the Sun and Saturn get together in your house of communication. Mercury joins the party when it enters Libra on the 3rd, and you hold the listener's attention like an expert! Use this power wisely, as people are affected by what you say. At home, things go from harmonious to somewhat out of tune. You see a few leaks and breaks around the house, and this extends into your familial relationships as Venus turns retrograde on the 7th. Use those heightened powers of communication to take the lead and things will come back together - just don't push too hard!

Virgo (Aug 23 - Sep 22)

Don't expect too much from others this month, and you'll avoid unnecessary disappointment. Instead, why not focus on balancing the books? Your house of assets is populated with the Sun and Saturn, with help from Mercury, and this combination focuses a sharp spotlight into your financial world. In particular, it brings discipline, and while this may imply revisions to your established routine, you won't have any trouble seeing that the benefits outweigh the costs. A love relationship is murky now, and there is no quick fix. Time and gentle effort will bring clarity.

Make sure your abundance of creative energy has a few different outlets this month - you'll need them.

Capricorn (Dec 22 - Jan 19)

The two most active parts of your chart this month - career and friends - are naturally high on your list of priorities, and closely related in your world. Your own Saturn continues its long journey through your career zone, giving you every extra energy and vision, but this month the Sun and Mercury will also pass through this area, and if you are not where you want to be with work, you will have to actively move toward it, lest the universe douse you with a proverbial bucket of cold water! Venus retrograde in your house of friends and networks will inspire you to reconfigure your social life to better serve your higher self, and your true goals.

Aquarius (Jan 20 - Feb 18)

It may be a trip to new town or a foreign country; or a workshop on a new kind of spiritual insight. Whatever it is, something gets you thinking this month, and when Venus goes retro on the 7th, you're restless for major change. The Sun and Saturn are powering up your house of new frontiers, while a new Moon in your private 12th house gives fertile soil for new growth in your inner life. The best way to prepare for this kind of a shake-up is to keep an open mind! If you are single, these changes will likely bring a new love interest in tow. If attached, keep your partner informed about how you feel; they will have to come along for the ride or be left behind.

Pisces (Feb 19 - Mar 20)

The same old routine just isn't going to cut it this month, Pisces. The stars have you positively burning and craving for personal change and new experiences. This is mostly due to Jupiter in retrograde through your own sign, plus Venus and Mars in your 9th house of new horizons. Strong sensations will come out of nowhere and create more questions than answers. Let your spiritual values guide you as transformation is effected. The Sun and Saturn throw an intense intimacy into the mix, so if you can have someone to share all this with - someone who can truly be present with you - all the better.

The X Factor

Is it written in the stars?

In the popular television series the X-factor, members of the public find themselves in competition to become the next big star. But how much of their success in the world of showbusiness is written in the stars from birth?

What is the 'X-factor'?

The X-factor is loosely defined as a winning combination of personal qualities and talents that destines an individual for great commercial and artistic success. Clearly the ability to sing well is a prerequisite for anyone wishing to make a career as a professional singer (though precedent has shown that this is not always the case), but what other qualities are needed to make it to the top, and how can a person's star signs indicate their future success?

Successful traits of the western Zodiac

Creativity is one of the most important aspects of any artistic endeavour, and those born under certain signs of the Zodiac are believed to have more creative talent than others. Leo is one such sign, and Leo's are said to be born entertainers, keen to share their talents with others and express themselves creatively. Perhaps the most famous Leo in the showbiz world is Madonna, who has continued to reinvent herself creatively over the course of the many decades which she has spent performing. Other well known Leo's include Mick Jagger, Robert de Niro and Whitney Houston.

Yet creativity is seldom enough to secure a place in the X-factor halls of fame. Charisma is an essential quality for holding the audience's attention, and that of the judges. Scorpios have charisma in spades and are never afraid to use it to their advantage. Natural charmers, they are also very passionate, and determined in their goals. However they do bruise easily, and their feelings might be hurt badly by negative remarks from the judges. Famous Scorpios include John Cleese, Katherine Hepburn and Demi Moore. Scorpios are also said to ooze sex appeal, and this is another important trait to have in order to make an impact on the glamorous high definition world of modern showbusiness.

An innate optimistic attitude is often necessary to successfully traverse the pitfalls of fame and come out shining on the other side. Sagittarians are known as one of the most optimistic star signs, and often set their sights high. Though they may conceal it, they firmly believe that anything is possible and will go to great lengths against the odds to get what they want. Perhaps the most famous Sagittarian is Winston Churchill, whose optimism and determination in the face of adversity is legendary. Musicians as diverse as classical composer Beethoven and rocker Jimi Hendrix were born under Sagittarius.

Chinese star signs and the X-factor

Being born under a sign of the zodiac with strong traits linked to artistic endeavour and performance provides a substantial advantage from the word go. But the year of birth is also an important indicator, and those with a star sign under the western zodiac that is naturally inclined towards performance may be unstoppable if also born in a year according to the Chinese calendar with similar or complimentary traits.

Those born in the Chinese Year of the Sheep are said to be particularly creative, artistic and charming. Yet they also harbour deep feelings of insecurity, and while this might push them to perform on stage initially, they are unlikely to make it all the way without substantial support from family and friends. They are also renowned worriers, and on the one hand this might drive them to perfection, but on the other it could eventually make them too nervous to perform, despite their talents. Julia Roberts, Pamela Anderson and Bruce Willis are all Sheep. Metal Sheep, those born in 1992, are far more ambitious than other Sheep, and so we can perhaps expect a good showing of talented Sheep in years to come.

Tiger, tiger, burning bright

Tigers, particularly Fire Tigers (1986), have many qualities which make them well suited to a career on the stage or screen. When Tigers talk, others listen, and they are often well respected, seeming to hypnotically draw in the attention of the onlooker. Their charm and natural charisma are destined to do well in the world of showbiz, particularly when the Tiger's western Zodiac sign is one which leans towards creativity and the arts. Screen icon Marilyn Monroe was born in the Year of the Tiger, as were Tom Cruise, Leonardo DiCaprio and Sir David Attenborough.

Some people may well be born with a kind of cosmic X-factor that drives them to succeed, and their personalities and talents may be seen as a sacred gift from the universe. But such fortuitous birthrights are by no means a proven formula for success, and the rest of us should continue chasing our dreams, whatever they may be.

READER PROFILE ANDREA

When did you first realise you were psychic?

I always knew I was different from an early age, but it wasn't until I was in my mid teens that I realised that not everyone could sense what others were feeling. I had always been tuned into friend's feelings and was as a very sensitive child growing up, hated causing upset as it used to make me uneasy with the many emotions that I could feel. It took a while to realise they weren't all my own. After that I started to be able to separate my own feelings to those of others, it became easier and by my early twenties my abilities had developed and heightened allowing me to pick up energies from other's with relative ease.

Have you had any great experiences with a customer who you have read for?

Absolutely, sometimes the best readings are those that I don't always know exactly what has gone on, as sensing the feelings may allow me to describe what the person went through, but not give me specifics about the actual event in question. My ability to direct clients also allows me to sense what is the correct path for them and by the end of the reading if I feel the client has taken on board where they should or what they should be doing, it gives me immense satisfaction to know you have helped them. Also as I have many repeat clients who tell me how I have helped it can be doubly rewarding.

What makes a good psychic reading?

For me it is when a client is open and is accepting of what is being said. I don't mean they have to try and make what I am saying fit, just listen and acknowledge that sometimes the answers to our questions may not always be exactly what we want to hear. I can't always tell a client that what they wish for is going to come true or that there is an easy road ahead of them, but what I can do is direct and guide them through any potential difficulties and deal with any grief and sense of loss they need to work through. But also by simply picking up on the main or underlying issues in a clients life allows a good foundation to giving a good and honest psychic reading.
